

Individual Reflection W9

What do I want to learn or understand better?

There's still a lot about Scrum that I can learn through reflecting on what has been, and I believe there will be more things coming up now that the project itself is over.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

Previously I've helped a lot with coding and github, but now that the project itself is done there won't be as much I can help others with learning. I have been very active in the team reflections before, and I think those of us who have been active there too have had some good discussions where all of us can learn from each other's perspectives. Hopefully that will continue for the final report, and hopefully everyone is active this time so we all can get something out of it.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

As before I've been working a lot with the reflections. I've once again tried to get everyone involved in helping with preparations so that we have more to discuss during the meeting where we go through the team reflection together, but just as previous week not everyone is doing that. Can't say there's been any change there from those who've been doing less before, though we who have been putting effort into it have spent even more time this week. We had some good discussions and a lot of things that will be useful for our final report were brought up.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

I've been productive in writing a lot of code this week, mainly I've been working on a settings page. As it was the last sprint I only focused on getting everything to work as intended, as a result the code as it is now is not as flexible or as well made for adding more to than it would've been if I had more time. That was simply a prioritization I had to make if I wanted to be able to include all functionality planned before.
